

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

RESILIENT FLOOR COVERING ) PENSION FUND, et al., ) Plaintiff(s), ) No. C08-5561 BZ
v. )
M & M INSTALLATION, INC., ) et al., ) Defendant(s). )
_____
)

On December 12, 2008, plaintiffs Resilient Floor Covering Pension Fund and Board of Trustees of the Resilient Floor Covering Pension Fund ("plaintiffs") filed suit against defendants M & M Installation, Inc. ("M & M") and Simas Floor Co., Inc. ("Simas Floor") (collectively "defendants") to collect withdrawal liability in the amount of $2,414,228.00, pursuant to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1001 et seq., as amended by the Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980 ("MPPAA").<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> All parties have consented to my jurisdiction, including entry of final judgment, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c) for all proceedings. On June 29, 2009, by agreement of the parties, plaintiffs filed a first amended complaint,

1 Before the Court are the parties' cross motions for summary 2 judgment.

3 Plaintiffs seek summary judgment on three grounds, 4 asserting that Simas Floor is liable for M & M's withdrawal 5 liability because Simas Floor and M & M were "alter ego" 6 employers; because M & M wound up its operations and 7 transferred its business to Simas Floor with a principal 8 purpose of avoiding paying its withdrawal liability in 9 violation of 29 U.S.C. § 1392(c); and because Simas Floor is 10 the successor employer to M & M. Defendants seek summary 11 judgment, arguing that Simas Floor is not liable for M & M's 12 withdrawal liability because Simas Floor is not an "employer" 13 within the meaning of the MPPAA, since it is neither under 14 "common control" with M & M, as defined under ERISA section 15 1301(b)(1), nor the "alter ego" or "successor" of M & M.
16 Simas Floor also seeks a declaratory judgment that a default 17 has not occurred within the meaning of 29 U.S.C.
18 § 1399(c)(5)(A)-(B) because it timely cured M & M's failure to 19 pay the June 2008 withdrawal liability payment and timely 20 requested review and arbitration of the Pension Fund's
21 determination that Simas Floor is liable for M & M's 22 withdrawal liability. Finally, Simas Floor seeks a refund of 23 all withdrawal liability payments it made under protest, a 24 total of $219,726.32.

25       ///
26       ///

---

27 which added one additional theory of withdrawal liability based 28 on "successor liability."

FACTUAL BACKGROUND<sup>2</sup>

It is undisputed that plaintiff Resilient Floor Covering Pension Fund ("Pension Fund") is a trust fund established and maintained pursuant to Section 302(c)(5) of the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 186(c)(5). The Pension Fund is an employee benefit plan within the meaning of Sections 3(2) and 3(3) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2) and (3), and is maintained for the purpose of providing retirement and related benefits to eligible participants. The Pension Fund is also a multiemployer pension plan within the meaning of Section 2(37) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1002(37). Plaintiff Members of the Board of Trustees of the Resilient Floor Covering Pension Fund ("Plaintiff Trustees") are fiduciaries within the meaning of Section 3(21)(A) of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1002(21)(A).

16 Defendant Simas Floor is a non-union residential and 17 commercial flooring contractor, and a retailer of flooring 18 products, with offices in Sacramento, Stockton, and Visalia.
19 It was founded by Robert Simas in the 1950's. In the early 20 1990's, Robert Simas left the company and sold his shares to 21 his three brothers, Ken, Jack and Dave Simas, leaving each of 22 them with an equal 33.33% interest. Effective January 1, 23 2004, Ken, Jack and Dave Simas each transferred by gift and 25                 <sup>2</sup> To the extent that the Court relies on any facts 26 objected to by either party, those objections are OVERRULED.

27 Plaintiffs' unopposed request for judicial notice is GRANTED, 28 to the extent of taking judicial notice of the fact that appellate briefs have been filed by the parties in Case No.
057688; not of the truth of the facts contained within those briefs.

1 sale their shares to their respective children, Mark Simas, 2 Michelle Simas Carli, and Craig Simas, who now each own 3 33.33% of Simas Floor. Mark Simas is Simas Floor's president 4 and Michele Simas Carli and Craig Simas are vice-presidents.
5 Along with their three fathers, the children also serve as 6 Simas Floor's directors.

7 Defendant M & M was formed on June 1, 1994 by Mark 8 Simas, as a residential flooring and tile contractor, which 9 operated out of Simas Floor's Sacramento facility. According 10 to Mark Simas, M & M was created to serve as a union 11 signatory flooring contractor to allow non-union Simas Floor 12 to bid on union jobs by subcontracting the work to 13 M & M. M & M entered into collective bargaining agreements 14 with Carpet, Resilient Flooring and Sign Workers Local Union 15 No. 1237 ("Local 1237"), which covered M & M's flooring 16 installers.<sup>3</sup> These agreements required M & M to make 17 contributions to the Pension Fund on behalf of M & M's 18 flooring installers.

19 When M & M's collective bargaining agreement came up for 20 renegotiation in mid-2004, Painters District Council No. 16 21 ("District Council") had assumed control of Local 1237.
22 During the ensuing negotiations, the District Council 23 insisted that it would only sign a new collective bargaining 24 agreement if M & M agreed that the new agreement would also 25 cover Simas Floor's Sacramento flooring installers. Since 26

---

27       <sup>3</sup> M & M also employed tile setters, who were covered by 28 a different collective bargaining agreement than its flooring installers.

1 Simas Floor did not want to become a union shop, M & M 2 refused to agree to the District Council's demands, which led 3 to an impasse in the negotiations and a strike by Local 1237 4 in July 2004.

5 After the strike, Mark Simas sent Local 1237 a letter 6 dated July 8, 2004 stating that M & M was withdrawing 7 recognition from the Union, effectively repudiating its 8 collective bargaining agreement. M & M thereafter stopped 9 making contributions to the Pension Fund.

10 After withdrawing recognition from the Union, M & M and 11 the union agreed to allow M & M to complete some outstanding 12 jobs. M & M finished those jobs with the approximately 13 twenty employees who returned to work after the strike, after 14 they had resigned from the union. At the end of 2005, M & M 15 laid off its remaining flooring installers, two of whom were 16 hired by Simas Floor.

17 Around October 29, 2004, after it ceased to contribute 18 to the Pension Fund, M & M received notice from the Pension 19 Fund that M & M had been assessed a $2,414,228.00 withdrawal 20 liability, with quarterly payments of $43,945.20 due every 21 March, June, September, and December for a period of twenty 22 years. Beginning in December of 2004 and through early 2008, 23 M & M made quarterly installment payments, using at least in 24 part Simas Floor's funds. After operating solely as a union 25 tile setting contractor for approximately three years, M & M 26 shut down its operations and wound up its business on April 27 30, 2008, selling its only assets (three used work trucks) to 28 Simas Floor. By letter dated June 27, 2008, M & M notified

1 the Pension Fund that it was going to stop making withdrawal 2 liability payments because it had "ceased operations" and 3 "wound up its affairs."

4       In a letter dated August 19, 2008, the Pension Fund 5 notified M & M that its June 2008 payment was delinquent and 6 demanded payment, contending that M & M was "still doing 7 business under the name of either M & M Installations or 8 Simas Floor Company" and that it "continues to be liable for 9 withdrawal liability." M & M received the Pension Plan's 10 August 19, 2008 letter on September 8, 2008. After some 11 negotiation, by letter dated November 6, 2008, Simas Floor 12 sent the Pension Fund the June 2008 quarterly withdrawal 13 liability payment, plus an additional amount representing 14 interest, under protest.

15       At the end of November 2008, Simas Floor, through its 16 attorney, wrote the Pension Fund requesting review in 17 accordance with MPPAA Section 4219(b)(2), 29 U.S.C. Section 18 1399(b)(2), in order to preserve Simas Floor's right to a 19 refund of the withdrawal liability amounts it had paid on 20 behalf of M & M. On May 13, 2009, Simas Floor, again through 21 its attorney, requested arbitration of the Pension Fund's
22 determination that Simas Floor is liable for M & M's 23 withdrawal liability.

24       Simas Floor has now paid, under protest, M & M's 25 withdrawal liability payments for June 2008, September 2008, 26 December 2008, March 2009 and June 2009, a total of 27 $219,726.32. Simas Floor now claims that it is entitled to 28 reimbursement of all payments made, and that it is not liable

1 for the balance of M & M's withdrawal liability. The 2 parties' central dispute concerns whether Simas Floor is 3 responsible for the withdrawal liability incurred by M & M.

4 THE ALTER EGO DOCTRINE

5 As a threshold issue, Simas Floor argues that it cannot 6 be held responsible for M & M's withdrawal liability because 7 it is not an "employer" within the meaning of the MPPAA, 29 8 U.S.C. § 1381.<sup>4</sup> Both parties agree that whether Simas Floor 9 is an "employer" within the meaning of the MPPAA is a legal 10 issue to be resolved by the Court. See, e.g., Bowers on behalf of NYSA-ILA Pension Trust Fund v. Transportacion Maritima Mexicana, 901 F.2d 258 (2d Cir. 1990) (citing Korea
Shipping Corp. v. New York Shipping Ass'n-Int'l Longshoremen's Ass'n Pension Trust Fund, 880 F.2d 1531, 1536
 15 (2d Cir. 1989)).

16 Plaintiffs contend that Simas Floor is an "employer" 17 upon whom withdrawal liability should be imposed because 18 Simas Floor and M & M are "alter egos".<sup>5</sup> A court may impose

---

19       <sup>4</sup> Section 1381 states, in relevant part: "(a) If an 20 employer withdraws from a multiemployer plan in a complete 21 withdrawal or a partial withdrawal, then the employer is liable 22 to the plan in the amount determined under this part [29 USCS §§ 1381 et seq.] to be the withdrawal liability." 29 U.S.C.
 § 1381(a).

23       <sup>5</sup> The Ninth Circuit has noted that "it may be perfectly 24 legal for a contractor to conduct business through a 'double 25 breasted' operation, one in which the same contractor owns both 26 union and non-union companies for legitimate business purposes.
 In such cases, the collective bargaining agreement of the union firm does not ordinarily apply to the non-union firm. Out of concern, however, that some contractors would use double-breasted operations to avoid their collective bargaining obligations, the courts and the NLRB have developed two conceptually related, but distinct theories - 'single employer' and 'alter ego' - to guard against such abuse." UA Local 343

1 pension fund liability upon a nonsignatory to a collective 2 bargaining agreement that is the "alter ego" of the 3 signatory. See Massachusetts Carpenters Cent. Collection 4 Agency v. Belmont Concrete Corp., 139 F.3d 304, 307-08 (1st 5 Cir. 1998). The party asserting the alter ego doctrine has 6 the burden of establishing it. See U.A. Local 373 v. Nor-Cal 7 Plumbing, Inc., 48 F.3d 1465, 1471 (9th Cir. 1994).

8 Defendants do not dispute that an employer found to be 9 the alter ego of another employer who has incurred withdrawal 10 liabilities may be responsible for the latter's withdrawal 11 liability. Nor do defendants dispute the first half of the 12 alter ego doctrine - that there is sufficient common 13 ownership, common management, interrelation of operations, 14 and centralized control of labor relations between M & M and 15 Simas Floor to satisfy the commonality requirement of the 16 alter ego doctrine. (Def.'s Opp. p. 16:19-23.) This is not 17 surprising, since it is undisputed that Simas Floor and M & M 18 had substantially identical ownership and management and that 19 Simas Floor formed M & M to allow Simas Floor to bid on union 20 jobs. In fact, M & M had no source of business other than 21 from Simas Floor and no office staff. The human resource 22 operations of M & M, including the hiring, disciplining, and 23 terminating of employees, were handled by Michelle Carli
 24

---

25 of the United Ass'n of Journeymen & Apprentices of the United 26 States and Canada, AFL-CIO, 48 F.3d 1465, 1469 (9th Cir. 1994) 27 (citing Carpenters' Local Union No. 1478 v. Stevens, 743 F.2d 28 1271, 1275-77 (9th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1015 (1985)). Plaintiffs do not argue that Simas Floor and M & M are a "single employer" operating under "common control."

1 Simas, who was paid by Simas Floor, not M & M.<sup>6</sup> M & M 2 employees worked out of the Simas Floor location in 3 Sacramento and M & M did not pay Simas Floor for use of Simas 4 Floor's Sacramento office space.<sup>7</sup> M & M had no phone line, 5 fax line, or website of its own. All of the daily 6 administrative work of M & M was performed by Simas Floor 7 employees and staff, using Simas Floor's office and 8 equipment. Simas Floor submitted all of M & M's bids and 9 billed customers for work performed by M & M. M & M had no 10 written subcontracts with Simas Floor. All the officers of 11 M & M received salaries from Simas Floor; not from M & M.
12 Simas Floor paid M & M only enough to cover M & M's overhead 13 and expenses, so M & M's net income was close to zero. M & M 14 never distributed any profits to its shareholders.

15 Instead of arguing that the commonality requirement of 16 the alter ego test has not been satisfied, defendants insist 17 that for Simas Floor to be found liable, plaintiff must prove 18 that M & M "was created by the union employer for the purpose 19 of evading the union employer's existing collective 20 bargaining obligations." (Def.'s Opp. p. 14:1-4.) To 21 support this proposition, defendants cite to Nor-Cal, 48 F.3d 22 at 1470-1471, as well as a recent Ninth Circuit case, 23 Southern California Painters & Allied Trades, District

24 _____
25 <sup>6</sup> Defendants' objections that this evidence is not 26 supported by the cited references provided by plaintiffs and was taken out of context are OVERRULED.

27 <sup>7</sup> Defendants' objection that this evidence is not 28 supported by the cited references provided by plaintiffs is OVERRULED.

1     Council No. 36 v. Rodin & Co., Inc., 558 F.3d 1028 (9th Cir.
2     2009), upon which defendants relied heavily during oral 3     argument. Neither of these cases, however, involved pension 4     fund liability.<sup>8</sup> What the Ninth Circuit said in Nor-Cal was 5     that the second half of the alter ego doctrine required the 6     union to show that the non-union employer "was being used in 7     a sham effort to avoid collective bargaining obligations."
8     Nor-Cal, 48 F.3d at 1470 (citing Brick Mason's Pension Trust 9     v. Industrial Fence & Supply, Inc., 839 F.2d 1333, 1336 (9th 10   Cir. 1988)). The court then stated that to bind a non-union 11   employer to a collective bargaining agreement signed by an 12   affiliated union employer, the union would have to show that 13   the non-union employer was "created in 'an attempt to avoid 14   the obligations of [the union employer's] collective 15   bargaining agreement through a sham transaction or a 16   technical change in operations.'" Id. at 1472 (quoting A.
17   Dariano & Sons, Inc. v. District Council of Painters No. 33, 18   869 F.2d 514, 518 (9th Cir. 1989)). In Rodin, the Ninth 19   Circuit refused to use the alter ego doctrine to impose a

21       <sup>8</sup> Defendants also rely on CMSH Co. v. Carpenters Trust Fund, 963 F.2d 238 (9th Cir. 1992). In 1978, CMSH Framing 22 "took over" CMSH's obligation under a collective bargaining 23 agreement and CMSH ceased all union operations. In 1980, 24 Congress passed the MPPAA which imposed liability on employers 25 who withdrew from established pension plans. In 1982, CMSH 26 framing did not renew its collective bargaining agreement and 27 later dissolved itself and incurred withdrawal liability. The 28 Ninth Circuit ruled that CMSH was not liable for CMSH Framing's withdrawing liability because CMSH had withdrawn from the pension fund before the passage of the MPPAA at a time when there was no withdrawal liability. The issue of retroactively imposing withdrawal liability on firms which had withdrawn from pension funds prior to the enactment of the MPPAA is not present here.

1 collective bargaining agreement on a non-union employer that 2 had allegedly created a separate union employer, stating that 3 "[t]he alter ego doctrine was never intended to coerce a non-4 union company into becoming a union company by requiring 5 compliance with a collective bargaining agreement it never 6 signed, with a union its employees never authorized to 7 represent them." Rodin, 558 F.3d at 1033.

8 Here, plaintiffs are not a union; they are pension fund 9 trustees. Plaintiffs are not trying to turn Simas Floor into 10 a union shop; they are simply trying to collect the pension 11 fund liability which M & M incurred during its 10 years of 12 operation. In such a situation, the second half of the alter 13 ego doctrine focuses not on the intent in creating the alter 14 ego employer but on whether recognizing the separateness of 15 the two employers undermines the purposes of ERISA and the 16 MPPAA.<sup>9</sup> As the First Circuit explained in Belmont:

17 The alter ego doctrine is meant to prevent employers 18 from evading their obligations under labor laws and 19 collective bargaining agreements through the device of 20 making "'a mere technical change in the structure or 21 identity of the employing entity . . . without any 22 substantial change in its ownership or management.'"

23 Although developed in the labor law context, alter ego 24 or successor liability analysis has been applied to 25 claims involving employee benefit funds brought under 26 ERISA and the LMRA. The rationale is that "an employer 27 who evades his pension responsibilities gains an 28 unearned advantage in his labor activities. Moreover, underlying congressional policy behind ERISA clearly favors the disregard of the corporate entity in cases where employees are denied their pension benefits."

---

26       <sup>9</sup> Unlike this case, in Rodin there was no evidence that 27 the union employer used the non-union employer to avoid its 28 union obligations or that the non-union employer benefitted from any arrangement it had with the union employer's labor force. Rodin, 558 F.3d at 1033-34.

1       In determining whether a nonsignatory employer is an 2 alter ego of a signatory, we consider a variety of 3 factors, including continuity of ownership, similarity 4 of the two companies in relation to management, business 5 purpose, operation, equipment, customers, supervision, 6 and anti-union animus-i.e., "whether the alleged alter 7 ego entity was created and maintained in order to avoid labor obligations." No single factor is controlling, and all need not be present to support a finding of alter ego status. In particular, there is no rule that wrongful motive is an essential element of a finding of alter ego status.

8       139 F.3d at 307-308 (citations omitted). More recently, the 9 First Circuit stated that the alter ego doctrine

10      is not a formalistic mechanism for reflexively regarding 11 distinct jural entities' as legally interchangeable whenever the entities' relationship is marked by a 12 sufficient number of the doctrine's characteristic criteria . . . . Rather, the doctrine is a tool to be employed when the corporate shield, if respected would 13 inequitably prevent a party from receiving what is otherwise due and owing from the person or persons who 14 have created the shield.

15      Massachusetts Carpenters Central Collection Agency v. A.A.

16      Building Erectors, Inc., 343 F.3d 18, 21-22 (1st Cir. 2003).

17      Other circuits generally agree. "[A]lter-ego liability does 18 not arise from any particular statutory provision at all, but rather from a general federal policy of piercing the 19 corporate veil when necessary to protect employee benefits."

20      See New York State Teamsters Conference Pension & Retirement Fund v. Express Services, Inc., 426 F.3d 640, 647 (2d Cir.

21      2005) (citing Bd. of Trs. v. Foodtown, Inc., 296 F.3d 164, 22      169 (3d Cir. 2002); Lumpkin v. Envirodyne Indus., Inc., 933

23      F.2d 449, 460-61 (7th Cir. 1991)). In a pension fund

24      liability case, the focus is less whether a union or non-25 union employer was created for an improper purpose, and more 26 whether disregarding their separate entities is necessary to 27
 28

1 protect employees' rights under ERISA and the MPPAA.

2 After reviewing the substantial undisputed evidence 3 presented by the parties about the manner in which Simas 4 Floor and M & M operated, I conclude that for purposes of 5 imposing pension fund withdrawal liability, plaintiffs have 6 established that Simas Floor and M & M were alter egos. To 7 find otherwise would defeat the purpose of the alter ego 8 doctrine in the ERISA and MPPAA context. It would permit 9 M & M to evade its obligations under ERISA and the collective 10 bargaining agreement. It would result in M & M's former 11 employees being deprived of contributions towards their 12 pension benefits that they earned under the collective 13 bargaining agreement M & M signed. It would also permit 14 Simas Floor to have gained an unearned advantage, allowing it 15 to keep the benefits of the profits it made from M & M's 16 union workforce without requiring it to bear the pension 17 responsibilities that work entailed.

18 The evidence that most troubles the Court is the way 19 Simas Floor controlled the cash that flowed through to M & M.
20 Simas Floor did not deal with M & M as an arms length 21 subcontractor; it merely provided M & M with sufficient funds 22 to pay operating expenses and overhead. This meant that 23 Simas Floor controlled M & M's profits, and that 24 consequently, M & M would never have had sufficient funds to 25 pay the withdrawal liability unless those funds were provided 26 to it by Simas Floor. The import of this ruling is to 27 require Simas Floor to do just that. Having benefitted for 28 10 years from work performed by employees protected by union

1 collective bargaining agreements, Simas Floor should bear the 2 burden of completing the funding of their pension 3 entitlements.

4 For all the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs are GRANTED
5 summary judgment against Simas Floor on the grounds that 6 Simas Floor and M & M were alter ego employers.<sup>10</sup>

7 DEFENDANTS' MOTION

8 For the reasons plaintiffs are granted summary judgment, 9 defendants are DENIED summary judgment on their claim that 10 Simas Floor is not an employer within the meaning of the 11 MPPAA.<sup>11</sup> This leaves defendants' motion for a declaratory 12 judgment that it is not in default under 29 U.S.C.
13 § 1399(c)(5)(A) or (B).

14 Plaintiffs argue that defendants are in default under 15 both sub-sections of section 1399 because defendants did not 16 timely submit M & M's September 2008 withdrawal liability 17 payment and because M & M's liabilities exceed its assets.

18 Section 1399(c)(5)(A) states that:

19 [i]n the event of a default, a plan sponsor may require 20 immediate payment of the outstanding amount of an 21 employer's withdrawal liability, plus accrued interest 22 on the total outstanding liability from the due date of the first payment which was not timely made . . . the term "default" means . . . the failure of an employer to make, when due, any payment under this section, if the failure is not cured within 60 days after the employer 23

---

24 <sup>10</sup> In view of this disposition I need not reach plaintiffs' alternative grounds for liability: a violation of 25 29 U.S.C. § 1392(c) and successor liability.

26 <sup>11</sup> Defendants also sought a ruling that it and M & M are not under "common control" within the meaning of 29 U.S.C.
27 § 1301(b)(1). This request is DENIED as moot, in view of the Court's ruling and the fact that plaintiffs did not seek relief 28 on this theory.

1 receives written notification from the plan sponsor of 2 such failure . . . ."

3 29 U.S.C. § 1399(c)(5)(A). The Supreme Court has stated 4 that:

5 [a] withdrawing employer's basic responsibility under 6 the MPPAA is to make each withdrawal liability payment 7 when due. The Act thus establishes an installment 8 obligation. Just as a pension plan cannot sue to recover 9 any withdrawal liability until the employer misses a scheduled payment, so too must the plan generally wait until the employer misses a particular payment before suing to collect that payment.

10 Bay Area Laundry & Dry Cleaning Pension Trust Fund v. Ferbar 11 Corp., 522 U.S. 192, 208 (1997).

12 Here, plaintiffs did not send written notice to 13 defendants, as required by section 1399, of defendants' 14 failure to pay the September 2008 quarterly liability 15 payment. Plaintiffs' August 18, 2008 letter demanding the 16 June 2008 payment was sent before defendants' September 17 installment payment was even due. It did not provide 18 defendants with written notification of the default as to the 19 September payment. Because defendants timely cured their 20 default of the June 2008 payment, plaintiffs' invocation of 21 the statutory acceleration provision was staved off.
22 Defendants never reinvoked it by making a written demand for 23 the September quarterly payment.

24 Plaintiffs assertion that defendants are in default 25 under section 1399(c)(5)(B) is equally unavailing. Like 26 section 1399(c)(5)(A), section 1399(c)(5)(B) permits a plan 27 sponsor to accelerate payments upon "any other event defined 28 in rules adopted by the plan which indicates a substantial

1 likelihood that an employer will be unable to pay its 2 withdrawal liability." Plaintiffs argue that under section 3 1399(c)(5)(B), defendants are in default because M & M's 4 liabilities exceed its assets. Having found that defendant 5 Simas Floor is responsible for M & M's withdrawal liability, 6 I find that defendants' liabilities do not exceed their 7 assets, as plaintiffs have submitted no evidence that Simas 8 Floor is insolvent, delinquent on its current bills, or 9 otherwise defunct in its daily operations.

10 Defendants' motion for summary adjudication is not in 11 default under section 1399(c)(5)(A)-(B) is therefore GRANTED.

12 Judgment shall be entered accordingly.

13 Dated: August 17, 2009

14
15
16 Bernard Zimmerman
United States Magistrate Judge

17
18 g:\bzall\~-bzcases\Resilient Floor Covering Pension\MSJ\Order on Cross Motions
19 for SJ V.2.BZ Version 2.wpd

20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28